

Janet Takens

Janet Takens was junior researcher at the start of the Netherlands News Monitor where she worked on several studies into journalistic practices in The Netherlands. Currently she is a PhD-student at the Communication Science department of the VU University in Amsterdam. For her PhD research she studies the effect of Dutch political news coverage on volatility, political trust, and the motivations underlying the vote. News coverage of the European Union is another of her research interests.