A socio-technical perspective on early Neolithic pottery in the Paris Basin, France

Louise Gomart | University Paris 1-Panthéon Sorbonne

This presentation introduces ongoing research on Early Neolithic pottery production in the Paris Basin (Aisne Valley, Picardy). It aims to reconstruct sequences of technical gestures using the concept of chaîne opératoire, from raw material procurement and preparation to forming, finishing, and decoration. The research draws on a multi-scalar analysis of ceramics from ten LBK settlements located along the Aisne river, combining petrography with micro- and macroscopic observations of surfaces and cross-sections, including SEM and micro-tomography.
