

RACE, RACE-THINKING AND IDENTITY IN THE MIDDLE AGES AND MEDIEVAL STUDIES

A seminar series about race, race-thinking, and racialization among scholars of late Antiquity and the Middle Ages. We aim to move beyond simplistic either-or binaries – race/not race, race/religion, race/ethnicity, US/Europe – to develop nuanced paradigms for racialization and its interaction, overlap, and interdependence with other forms of social categorization, and to consider how Critical Race Theory might inspire and inform historical study.

Walter Pohl, University of Vienna
Cord Whitaker, Wellesley College
Critical Approaches to Race and Ethnicity: Premodern
Identities and the Trans-Atlantic Politics of Scholarship

Thursday, February 11, 11 am (EST, United States)

Moderation: Michelle M. Sauer, University of North Dakota

Register for the seminar at <http://bit.ly/2021feb11>
For any questions please contact Sarah Porter: sp7@princeton.edu

Seminar Series organized by Medievalists of Color; the Program in Medieval Studies, Princeton University; the Division for Identity Studies, Institute for Medieval Research of the Austrian Academy of Sciences, Vienna; and the School of Historical Studies at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton.