The Austrian Centre for Digital Humanities and Cultural Heritage (ACDH-CH), a research department of the Austrian Academy of Sciences (OeAW), Austria's leading non-university research institution, has been bringing together two focal points of the Austrian Academy of Sciences in one institute pursuing (a) basic research in the humanities in long-term projects for the development and preservation of cultural heritage and (b) research in the methodological and theoretical paradigms of digital documentation, processing, research and visualisation of the digital humanities. Within the ACDH-CH, both pillars are intended to increasingly cross-fertilise each other and, thus, contribute to the development of joint work on the rich treasure of Europe's cultural memory. The institute is offering a

PROJECT SCIENTIST (F/M/X)

(20-40h per week)

starting from July 01st, 2024, at the earliest in the FWF funded project "The Accounts of Aldersbach Monastery – Analysing the Social and Economic History of a Prototypical Large Enterprise Using Digital Methods" (Website)

Your tasks:

- Ability to read and transcribe handwritten account book entries in Latin from 15th century sources. What is challenging here is less the relatively simple Middle Latin than the handwriting, which is usually difficult to read.
- The account book entries will be transcribed as part of the project, but a translation into a modern language is not planned.

Your profile:

- Study of Medieval Latin Philology or a comparable qualification.
- Extensive experience with late medieval manuscripts in Latin.
- Proficiency in working independently

We offer an annual gross salary of € 50.364,44 (full time) according to the collective agreement of the Austrian Academy of Sciences.
